Thomas J. Carrocino Appointed
President of Hungerford & Terry, Inc.

Clayton, NJ – Hungerford & Terry has announced, effective March 20, 2014, Thomas J. Carrocino will be the new President of the employee-owned, world-renowned water conditioning purification engineering and manufacturing firm.

Mr. Carrocino succeeds Mr. Alan Davis, who will be retiring after 42 years, the last 19 as President. Prior to that he was H&T's Chief Engineer and Vice President of Engineering. During his tenure as President, he oversaw the company's steady growth and cutting-edge improvements in its state-of-the-art water systems and H&T specialties, including the removal of iron, manganese, arsenic, radium, hydrogen sulfide and nitrate, which meet the wide-ranging needs of H&T customers around the globe.

Mr. Carrocino has been with Hungerford & Terry for 37 years, serving the company with distinction in a variety of positions. For the past 11 years, he was entrusted as the Vice President of Operations, effectively overseeing all of the company's daily operations. Other positions he has held have been in the areas of Sales, Service, Purchasing and Engineering. Since 1994, Mr. Carrocino has been on Hungerford & Terry's Board of Directors. "I'd like to thank the Hungerford & Terry organization for all of their tremendous support I've received over the years," says Mr. Carrocino. "I see this as an excellent opportunity for us to further our goals of penetrating deeper into the water purification marketplace. As an employee-owned company, we rely on our water purification technology successes, as well as our nationwide representatives, to develop the best answers to critical water purification challenges today—just as we did more than a century ago."
